About georgitsvetanskigogo

Greetings! I'm Georgi Tsvetanski. I come from Sofia, Bulgaria, and currently I am a junior communication major at the University of Maryland College Park, at the Universities at Shady Grove. My academic journey began with aspirations of becoming a marine biologist as I love science and the wildlife. Later, I earned an Associate's degree in Animation, laying a strong foundation in digital media. If you encounter me, let's discuss my blogs or a hobby – chances are, I'll share your interest! Meanwhile, I'm a freelance game developer. I started as a developer of cardboard games with pen and paper, and then as I grew older my fascination with the gaming industry immersed myself in game development, embarking on a knowledge-seeking journey fuelled by a passion for learning. I've transitioned from a gamer and indie developer to a community manager, and I want to expand my expertise. As a communication major, I explore ways to enhance interactions and resolve conflicts using persuasive and invitational rhetoric while maintaining respect. My goal is to create a fun yet professional atmosphere, a supportive environment I want to contribute to at USG and at my internship at the Cyber-Physical Systems Engineering Center. As a blogger, I plan to delve into topics like science and mental health (how diet affects mood), apply my game development skills to real-life scenarios (e.g., Game Theory), and share insights as an international student at USG. Beyond gaming, I practice martial arts, 3D modelling, and practicing traditional and digital art. I like to try new things, explore, and learn about different kinds of matters as being exposed to new perspectives can be both enlightening and intriguing. My journey to the United States has ignited my sense of adventure and a desire to learn and grow. Thank you for getting to know me, and my blogs have something for everyone!
